Bellarmino College of Liberal Arts

Description

Dr. Lauer is a neuroscientist who joined the faculty of LMU in a Visiting role in 2017. Her previous research focused on the neurobiology of alcohol and nicotine use. More recently, her research interests have shifted to pedagogy, as she pursues continued growth in her passion as an educator. At LMU, she teaches courses in Statistical Methods for Psychology, General Psychology, and Social Psychology.

Dr. Lauer earned her B.A. in Biology at DePauw University (IN) and her Ph.D. in Neuroscience at Indiana University. Following a postdoctoral fellowship at Indiana University - Purdue University - Indianapolis (IUPUI), she joined the Psychology Department at Franklin College (IN) as an Assistant Professor in 2011. Over the next six years, she gained extensive experience in teaching and pedagogy research, mentored over 25 undergraduate research projects, and served the college through various assessment and curriculum committees. She was awarded promotion and tenure at Franklin College in 2017, shortly before relocating to the Los Angeles area.
