A Creator's Guide to Transmedia Storytelling. Expert transmedia designer Andrea Phillips shows you the future of digital marketing

Biography

Andrea Phillips is an award-winning transmedia writer, game designer and author. Her book, A Creator's Guide to Transmedia Storytelling, will be published by McGraw-Hill in June 2012.

Her work includes a variety of educational and commercial projects, including Floating City with Thomas Dolby, The Maester's Path for HBO's Game of Thrones with Campfire Media, The Drunk and On Drugs Happy Funtime Hour Quest with Stitch Media, America 2049 with human rights nonprofit Breakthrough, Routes Game for Channel 4 Education, the independent commercial ARG Perplex City, and The 2012 Experience for Sony Pictures.

These projects have won awards including the Prix Jeunesse Interactivity Prize, a Broadband Digital award, a BIMA, an IVCA Grand Prix award, the Origins Vanguard Innovation Award, and others.

Her indie work includes the Kickstarted collaboration Balance of Powers, the ongoing Twitter horoscopes of Madame Zee, the e-published anthology Shiva's Mother and Other Stories, and the forthcoming serial transmedia project Felicity.

Andrea is a co-moderator for the first community of ARG players, the Cloudmakers. This 6,000-member group created many of the methods and social dynamics used by the ARG community to this day. She is also a Fellow of the Futures of Entertainment.

She has spoken at SXSW, MIT Storytelling 3.0, the Power to the Pixel/IFP Cross-Media Forum, ARGfest, DIY Days, FITC Storytelling X.1, and Nordic Games Conference, among others.

Andrea cheats at solitaire (a victimless crime) and Words With Friends (which is less forgivable). Consider yourself warned.

A Creator's Guide to Transmedia Storytelling

Transmedia is definitely a buzzword these days, and forward-thinkers from Madison Avenue to Hollywood are trying to get up to speed about what it is and how to get in on the action. Andrea Phillips will share lessons from her book, "A Creator's Guide to Transmedia Storytelling," a practical manual on the art and craft of telling a story over multiple media.

Extending Your Story

Moving from single-media to transmedia storytelling requires a new mindset and a new creative process. Andrea Phillips walks you through the possibilities and pitfalls.

Hoax or Transmedia? The Ethics of Pervasive Fiction

The classic ARG storytelling technique involves putting content into the real world and web as if the story were really happening. But the line between truth and fiction online is blurry—and getting blurrier all the time—so not everyone who finds your content will know it's not for real. One person's hoax is another's deeply immersive experience. So how does a transmedia designer learn to strike the right balance between immersive and responsible?

Why Games Need Transmedia

Games already feature many of the elements that make transmedia so compelling – but branching into transmedia storytelling can lead to richer games and more vibrant fandoms. Learn why and how game designers should extend their IP across multiple media.

Alternate Reality Games and Women: Moving Beyond the Hot Brunette

ARGs are often trotted out as a shining example of woman-friendly games. They boast unusually high rates of female developers and players, and a slew of kick-ass female leads. But if you dig a little deeper, are they still just the post-Buffy version of Princess Peach, always needing to be saved?

Author

Shiva's Mother and Other Stories is a collection of moody, sometimes dark short stories about technology, magic, choice and sacrifice. Journey from cutting-edge nanotech to faery and back again, along the line where science fiction and fantasy blur together.

Testimonials

Lucas J.W. Johnson

Both smart and funny, Andrea has a great breadth of experience in the trenches of creation that grounds her talks in reality, with truly useful insights into the actual nuts and bolts of things. At the same time, her passion excites you by proximity, and she's one of the most gracious people I know. Having her speak to Transmedia Vancouver was more than worthwhile -- it was instructive and inspiring.
