Experienced Webinar Facilitator and Knowledge Manager

Description

Certified Educator who has taught public high school English and is tutoring both publicly and privately, seeks opportunities to tutor grade school students, graduate school students, and everything in between. I endeavor to have education be the source of everything that I do, both in my full time career, my part time businesses, and my free time pursuits.

I am a Webinar Facilitator for a leader in the industry that has innovated and pioneered many e-Learning solutions over the years. We provide webinars for the U.S. Government, and I facilitate that experience as well as provide coordination so leaders in government and private individuals get the information they need that will assist in transforming the workforce and lead to a more competitive, stable, satisfied and prosperous America in the 21st century.

I am a freelance writer, and I tutor students in writing as well as the English language as a whole. I created a freelance writing company with a friend, and now I work for myself. I have undertaken and collaborated on several major freelance writing projects, including a long term Family History Project, thesis papers, and creating a skit around educational theories.

I am a stress management consultant that works with a non-profit, Panic Relief, that has been making a difference in New Jersey and across the nation for the past 14 years. I teach powerful concepts and facilitate paradigm-shifting programs that support and educate those who experience anxiety, panic attacks, panic disorder, agoraphobia, and stress. We deliver programs in libraries and adult education programs throughout New Jersey, as well as virtually and through our website platform for the entire nation.
