

Carolyn Elliott

Student Trustee at Fielding Graduate University

Marianna, AR, US

Organizational Consultant with expertise in capacity building, conflict management and team assessments.

Description

Carolyn is currently the CEO of the M.I.K.E. group, an organizational consulting company that focuses on capacity building, conflict management, and team assessments. Prior to this work, she founded and directed a non-profit organization called the Brown Magnolia. This organization focused on assisting HBCUs to build their capacity for accessing federal research grants. In this work, she brought to bear her decades-long experience in public education as teacher and later as program evaluator and administrator. She also worked for the Arkansas Department of Public Education, directing all of their service learning programs, and she taught courses that focused on education and social policy for the University of Arkansas.

She has an extensive record in grant funding as well as initiating programs in the community service sector.
