To technology enthusiast Chris Van Dusen, an elevator pitch is the most important instrument in the entrepreneur's toolbox. A clear, concise, easily understood pitch can open the door to capital and customers; a poorly crafted pitch can scuttle interest in even the most innovative startup.

Van Dusen, co-founder and president of i-FFICIENCY, and business development and new media director for Rief Media, shared his tips for constructing a valuable elevator pitch with a Calit2 audience at this week's TechPortal Entrepreneurs Series lunchtime lecture.
