

David Shock, Ph.D.

Professor of Political Science at Kennesaw State University

Kennesaw, GA, US

Professor Shock conducts research in a variety of areas including local government home rule and local tax referenda politics.

Description

Dr. Shock is a professor of Political Science at Kennesaw State University. He received his Ph.D. in Political Science in 2002 from Miami University. Shock teaches courses on American government, state and local government, and public administration. In addition to teaching, he conducts research in a variety of areas including local government home rule, local tax referenda politics, and state-level ballot access policies for third party and independent candidates. His research has been published in the Social Science Journal, the Journal of Political Science, Government Finance Review, the New England Journal of Political Science, and Politics & Policy.

Industry Expertise

Education/Learning, Political Organization, Government Administration, Public Policy

Topics

Social Science, Political Policy, Government Finance, Local Tax Referendum Politics, Public Administration, State ballots, American Government, State and Local Government, Elections

Affiliations

City of Kennesaw Art and Culture Commission

Education

Miami University

Ph.D. Political Science

Please click here to view the full profile.

This profile was created by Expertfile.