Biography

Dr Anne-Marie Greenslade is a Senior Lecturer with a background as a frontline practitioner in both the voluntary and public sectors. Her experience supporting refugee communities in Kosovo fuelled her interest in international human rights; she later worked alongside the police and the CPS as an independent advocate for survivors of rape and sexual abuse. Anne-Marie has an LLM in International Human Rights, specialising in the legal responses to human trafficking and contemporary slavery. She joined Leeds Law School in 2017 as a Graduate Teaching Assistant and became a Lecturer in 2021. She was awarded her PhD in 2022 and is now Course Leader for the Postgraduate Diploma in Law (distance learning). Anne-Marie has contributed to roundtables for the Modern Slavery and Human Rights Policy and Evidence Centre and won awards for LBU's Vitae 3MT and the Partnership for Conflict, Crime and Security Research ?Snapshots?.
