Dr. David Kaplowitz, Life Coach, knows how to make a comeback; he has done it many times. In fact, his recent actualization as a life and business coach is the culmination of his latest comeback efforts, which has enabled him to realize his true calling: improving the lives of others around him. David's determination coupled with his intuition and innate ability to connect with people allows him to show others that their obstacles are actually stepping stones to opportunity. A graduate of Palmer College of Chiropractic in 1977, David opened his Chiropractic Center in June of 1979 and was the first doctor in the state of CT to advertise. Hosting a weekly call-in radio show for years, he promoted his practice to an astonishing pace of 100 patients a day. As he honed his public speaking skills, David began to share his success with fellow doctors by lecturing internationally, for Chiropractic management groups. In the early 1990s, life changed for David. The introduction of the managed care insurance programs cut his practice volume in half. After reassessing the healthcare landscape, David switched gears and began to build a large distribution channel for a vitamin supplement company. In a short time, his organization stretched around the world, where he lectured and held workshops that helped motivate and organize thousands of distributors. In just 18 months, he replaced his chiropractic income and retired from private practice, finally ending his frustration in dealing with newly formed HMO's and PPO's. All of this has led David to a career in Coaching. While helping his clients realize they already know the answers to their limiting beliefs, David works with each individual to develop the leadership skills, habits, and behaviors that make living a sustained life at the top possible.
