Biography

Dr. Lessin has been a practicing Pediatrician since 1982. He received his Doctor of Medicine from Stanford University in Palo Alto California and completed three years of Pediatric Residency training at Yale-New Haven Hospital. Before founding The Children's Medical Group (CMG), a practice of 24 pediatricians practicing in 8 offices and caring for more than 32,000 children, Dr. Lessin was managing partner of the Hudson Valley Pediatric Group. At CMG, he has served as both the Medical Director and the Director of Clinical Research. Dr. Lessin was also a founding member of the Taconic IPA and served as its Chairman for 14 years. That organization now boasts over 3000 physician members serving over 150,000 patients. Dr. Lessin has broad media experience in radio, print, television and internet venues in which he provides patient education and was a member of the National Association of Medical Communicators. He appeared as host of "Kidstuff" on local radio for more than 15 years, was the author of "Pediatrician on Call" in a regional newspaper for 10 years, has appeared on local and regional television, and has written broadly on health information portals and blogs. Dr. Lessin is active on a national level in the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP), serving as a member of the national Committee on Practice and Ambulatory Medicine, which reviews and comments upon all national AAP policies prior to publication. He is co-lead author of the national AAP policy on Immunization Coverage published and the upcoming statement on Immunizing Adult Caregivers in the Pediatric Office. He lectures nationally at AAP conferences and has been an invited speaker at multiple institutions and meetings, garnering outstanding audience reviews. Dr. Lessin is a media spokesperson for the AAP and has been quoted in The Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, NY Times and the Associated Press. He has gone on more than a dozen medical mission trips to under-developed countries including Vietnam, Honduras, Guatemala, and Ghana. He has presented to the medical staff at multiple children's hospitals in Vietnam. For 25 years he has served as an expert consultant in Medical Malpractice litigation for both Plaintiff and Defense. He is board certified in Pediatrics and in Pediatric Advanced Life Support.
