Description

Hillary Berman is the founder of Popcorn & Ice Cream, a Washington, DC-based marketing consulting firm focused exclusively on making marketing strategy and services available to small businesses and start-ups at a scale appropriate to their size and at a price they can afford. She is also the author of Customer, LLC: The Small Business Guide to Customer Engagement & Marketing and a Google Small Business Advisor.

Since founding the company in 2011, Hillary has led the Popcorn & Ice Cream team in its work with more than four dozen small businesses to launch new products and services, open new bricks and mortar locations, increase brand recognition, drive leads, close more sales and improve customer retention. She and her team regularly work with businesses at all stages -- including pre-launch startups and early stage businesses, as well as existing, established organizations.

Hillary brings experience working in and for businesses of varying size to her small business clients. Cutting her teeth at Grey Group in New York, Hillary got her first taste of small business at a dot.com reminiscent of Facebook, but sadly before its time. Upon moving back to Washington, DC, Hillary worked for a start-up technology company that was later sold to a major telecom before turning back to the agency world where she continued to build her portfolio of work with both Fortune 500 companies and small businesses alike. Prior to launching Popcorn & Ice Cream, Hillary worked with her husband to build and grow a financial services business.

Hillary holds a BS in advertising from the SI Newhouse School of Public Communications at Syracuse University and an MBA from the University of Maryland's Robert H. Smith School of Business.

Making Sense of Marketing

There are tons of choices and opportunities when it comes to marketing. And each one promises to grow your business. This workshop explores how to choose marketing programs that make sense for your business. And once you've selected a marketing program, how can you make the most of it? This workshop will also cover how to make the most of your marketing investments so you engage new audiences, capture leads and nurture them into becoming customers.

Specific takeaways include:

- How to evaluate a marketing opportunity for its value to your business.
- Key components of a great marketing campaign.
- Setting yourself up successful execution of marketing programs.

Foundations of Customer-Centric Marketing

You wouldn't build a house without pouring the foundation, right? So why do so many small business owners jump into "marketing" without first establishing the foundations of a customer-centric business?

"Marketing," as most business owners think of it, is the fun stuff – the videos that go viral, the awesome offers that drive hundreds of customers in a single week. "Marketing" is the social media, advertising, email campaigns, limited-time discounts and so on.

But without a strong foundation, "marketing" can quickly become an expensive, losing endeavor. This workshop covers the essential elements to position a small business to embark on programs that engage the customers they already have and reach the ones they want.

Love Your Customers – They'll Show You the Love in Return

When small businesses embrace their customers at their core, customers show them love in return. The result? Unmatched customer satisfaction, loyalty, referrals and growth.

Customer love is about going beyond customer satisfaction to build true customer relationships. It's about making lasting positive impressions on customers. Customer-centric marketing doesn't have to be hard. And it doesn't have to be expensive. This workshop highlights the power of satisfied customers and leaves attendees with ideas of how to engage more deeply with customers at every level of their business.

The Power of Customer Feedback

Customers' perspectives offer an invaluable resource for small businesses focused on continuous improvement and maintaining excellence. While feedback isn't always easy to hear, not hearing from unhappy or underwhelmed customers is far worse. This workshop encourages attendees to recognize both criticism and praise for the incredible value they offer, as well as how to:

- Ask for feedback and use it for continuous improvement.
- Respond to both positive and negative feedback.
- Turn an unhappy customer into a happy one again.

Driving Word of Mouth - Referrals Happen Because of Marketing

“I don’t do any marketing. All of my new business comes from referrals.” How often do small business owners make this claim?

But referrals don’t generate themselves. Referrals happen because a business consistently delivers an experience that customers appreciate, recognize and want to share with others.

This workshop teaches attendees how to embrace satisfied customers and create a referral culture within their business. Attendees will leave with an understanding of how to:

- Be top of mind when referable moments occur.
 - Create referable moments.
 - Effectively and confidently ask for referrals.

Hillary understands what integrity, creativity, and hard work can do for a business, and that is what she brings to every meeting and every task. I don't find that I have to explain too much to Hillary, she just gets it. She is funny, smart as a whip, and current!

Launching a new business is daunting, but Hillary and Popcorn & Ice Cream makes the whole process easier â€œ providing guidance on what to sell, how to sell it, and how to market it. Working together, I have a more clearly defined path for growing my business.

Meghan Khaitan

When we started with MyBuckleMate, we had no idea whether it would take root, but with Hillary's expertise and Popcorn & Ice Cream's work, we defined an entirely new product category as well as build and position the brand. Their spot-on recommendations saved me a lot of time, deliberation and money, kept me focused and positive, and helped me think about the business in both the short- and long-term and in new ways. After I began working with Hillary and Popcorn & Ice Cream, I didn't have to scramble each day to figure out the â€œnow what?â€ to grow the business. They also, very simply, got things done better and faster than I could. We've achieved amazing and tangible results all without a paid PR program and I'm pretty damn impressed with every aspect of the work they did, the thought they put into it and the results.

Annie Hesser

Tremendous! Customer Love is a very interactive and thought-provoking workshop. I definitely left the day with lots of takeaways and to do lists. It's a really great workshop if you run your own business and are not so good at the marketing side of things. It was worth every dime!
