

Jay Dill, PhD

Adjunct Faculty - School of Psychology at Fielding Graduate University

Asheville, NC, US

Social Psychologist and Consciousness Studies Researcher

Jay Dill earned a degree in social psychology from the University of Missouri-Columbia in 1997. He teaches courses in the areas of consciousness studies, social and health psychology, research methods, statistics and introductory psychology, and has published in the areas of motivation, attribution, social inference, and aggression.

His current interests focus on the neural correlates of the meditative state along with neurostimulation and neurofeedback techniques toward enhancing the meditative process.

Education/Learning, Mental Health Care, Training and Development, Research

Social Psychology, Meditation, Neuroscience, Consciousness Studies

Lenoir-Rhyne University : Associate Professor, Walden University : Part-time Faculty, Capella University : Adjunct Faculty

Portrayal of women in violent video games

(March, 2001) 46th Annual Meeting of the Southeastern Psychological Association

The effects of violent video game play on perceptions of aggression in human social interactions

(March, 1999) 44th Annual Meeting of the Southeastern Psychological Association,

A speech intensive format for teaching courses in psychology

(May, 1998) 10th Annual Meeting of the American Psychological Society

The effect of emotional valence on the multiplicity of inferences

(July, 1996) 8th Annual Meeting of the American Psychological Society

University of Missouri-Columbia

PhD Social Psychology

University of Missouri-Columbia

MA Social Psychology

University of Alabama at Birmingham

BS Psychology

Please click here to view the full profile.

This profile was created by Expertfile.