Biography

I'm a business designer; I work in all the intersecting parts of operations, marketing and strategy. I bring together 20+ years of business acumen and fluency which spans digital and social strategy, sales, marketing, communications, operations, management, training and education, business analysis, workflow and process design, and project management to help companies design and redesign their opportunities, both internally and externally. What's most engaging to me is that which creates a dialogue. Collaboration is key. I intrinsically believe that when we all win, we all win. It impacts how I work, and how I live. I'm an exceptional connector. I understand how connecting people and ideas creates opportunities, and my instincts are valued by my connections. It's not about the size of my network; it's about seeing the possibilities. I am an educator. I have built online and offline courses and curricula before LMS' existed, and have taught for over 15 years, including social media marketing, sales skills, internet, data and voice technology and soft skills. Having always been an early adopter of technology means I'm on the leading edge of emerging platforms with a discerning eye on design and user experience. I am a passionate, and knowledgeable public speaker, which stems from my years as an educator in ICT and the arts, and my desire to have impact on an audience and a community. I'm an award-winning communicator. I craft messaging that is compelling, topical, impactful, and is engaging and authentic. I create events and experiences that are goal driven and have purpose. I'm an intrapreneur. I bring an elephant hunting spirit to advising businesses, always answering the question: to what end? I view organizations holistically, designing processes and efficiencies, saving my organizations hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. I have an innate understanding of the importance of establishing best practices and how to measure their impact.
