Associate Vice President, Career Development & Corporate Engagement at Wake Forest University
Winston-Salem, NC, US

Eyadiel's mission is to help students discover their values and provide ways for them to translate their interests into a rewarding career.

Biography

Mercy Eyadiel believes that key to helping students secure not just any job, but the right job, is a strong network of people who teach, guide and support them both personally and professionally. With nearly 20 years experience in career development, Eyadiel's mission and passion are to help students discover their values and provide ways for them to translate their interests into a rewarding career. As such, she has been quoted in national media outlets ranging from the Wall Street Journal to Parents magazine.

In the Office of Personal and Career Development, Eyadiel imagines new ways to fuel excitement and build connections using every available resource, including potential employers, alumni and parents. She says matching the right student with the right job opportunity is a method for long-term career success. Eyadiel knows that fostering connections with local and national businesses, developing successful internship opportunities and working with alumni and parents help open doors.
