Biography

Patrick L Young is an expert in all aspects of financial markets world-wide, as well as startups & entrepreneurship. A seasoned investor, he has worked in private equity and public markets as well as running a stock/derivatives exchange and advising many leading players in the field of creating markets and investment opportunities. His futuristic books on the future of finance have been shaping financial market thinking throughout the past decade. Beginning with "Capital Market Revolution!" in 1999, Young outlined a "ruthless vision" of the digital financial marketplace which proved highly accurate in many of its (then) astonishing predictions. His involvement with the Web dates back to 1994 and he is a lecturer in entrepreneurship and startups at Nicolaus Copernicus University, in Torun, Poland. Most recently, Young edited "The Gathering Storm" a collection of articles about the outlook for finance by a series of leading figures who themselves predicted the credit crunch in the west of 2007-2008. A passionate innovator, Young has considerable experience in emerging markets, particularly the "New Europe." A regular media speaker, he has appeared on networks world-wide including BBC, CBC News, CNBC, CNN, RT and Sky News amongst others while his opinion pieces have been published in leading financial journals such as L'Agefi, the Australian Financial Review, Boersen Zeitung, Financial Times and the Wall Street Journal. Young is an expert keynote speaker and panel or event Chairman and has spoken at conferences for audiences of up to 1000 people all over the world. Young divides his time between his homes in Monaco and Poland while spending an inordinate amount of time travelling throughout the world.
