The Consumerization of Enterprise IT

Discussion of the emergence of consumer-driven, social collaboration networks that are forcing companies' IT infrastructure to evolve and become the foundation of a new way of doing business. For the past 30 years, corporate leaders have spent trillions of dollars on "systems of record" that carry out critical functions, from supply chain management to financials. Now they must learn how best to layer "systems of engagement" on top of their current enterprise IT infrastructure.
