Committed to positive change through emotional intelligence

Susan Stillman, EdD, is a 2007 Fielding ELC graduate. She is the Director of Education for the world's largest emotional intelligence (EQ) network and dedicated to supporting all educators in the teaching, practice, and measurement of EQ. She is a former K-12 school counselor and has consulted on the implementation of social emotional learning principles and practices around the world. Former chair of the Social Emotional Learning (SEL) Special Interest Group at AERA, she offers training, strategic planning, and research assistance for both K-12 schools and universities who wish to integrate SEL into their programs. Dr. Stillman currently teaches IECD 206 and IECD 307 to students in the Infant and Early Childhood Social Emotional Development program in the School of Leadership Studies at Fielding Graduate University. She also mentors students and chairs doctoral committees.

Dr. Stillman is the lead trainer for EQ for Educators, EQ Tools for Education, and EQ Practitioner Certification courses for Six Seconds. In addition to EQ, Dr. Stillman has expertise in educational leadership, curriculum and instruction, social emotional learning, school counseling, and grounded theory methodology. Her current research focuses on EQ and the application of social emotional learning in schools and with students, teachers, and administrators, world-wide.

Dr Stillman is a former Fellow of the Institute for Social Innovation at Fielding Graduate University, and a National Certified Counselor and Licensed Professional Counselor.
