Dr. Trenette T. Clark Goings is an Associate Professor in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's School of Social Work. She is a Faculty Affiliate at the Duke University Center for Biobehavioral and Social Aspects of Health Disparities, an Associate Member at the UNC Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center, and a Faculty Affiliate at the University of Georgia Center for Contextual Genetics & Prevention Science. Dr. Goings is also a NIH/National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities Scholar. Her research focuses broadly on identifying and preventing racial and ethnic health disparities. To achieve this goal, her primary research focuses on the epidemiology, etiology, prevention, and consequences of substance use and risky sexual behaviors among adolescents and young adults. She also has some interest in rural issues stemming from her rural roots in northeastern North Carolina. Dr. Goings received her Ph.D. in social work from Virginia Commonwealth University, a Master's of Social Work degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and undergraduate degrees from Elizabeth City State University. She holds a nonprofit leadership certificate from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is licensed to practice clinical social work in North Carolina and Washington, DC. Prior to enrolling into her PhD program, Dr. Goings worked as a social worker on interdisciplinary teams in the Department of Neurology at Duke University Medical Center. Dr. Goings is currently the principal investigator of two funded research projects including "Substance Use Trajectories and Health Outcomes of Monoracial and Biracial Blacks," a 5-year research grant funded by the National Institutes of Health, National Institute on Drug Abuse. She has managed several federally funded etiology and intervention research projects. Her research has been published in several peer-reviewed journals, including Health Psychology, Drug & Alcohol Dependence, and Addictive Behaviors. She has presented her research at local, state, and national conferences, including the Society for Prevention Research, the American Public Health Association, and The College on Problems of Drug Dependence.
